Stage Coach

Yearbook of

St. Mary's

School and Junior College

Foreword

Like a tiny spark of fire
Saint Mary's Spirit will linger.
Though at times it may grow dim,
It will always live in our hearts.

The class of 1953 wrote a song which stated a commonplace but extremely important idea. Although this idea has often been incorporated in songs, we feel that the lyrics of our song surpass the average in expressing Saint Mary's Spirit.

We, the editors of the 1953 STAGE COACH, adopted this idea because we feel that the words, Saint Mary's Spirit, make us conscious of the meaning of close associations. In showing the various aspects of life at Saint Mary's, we have tried to add in word and picture the intangible which symbolizes the lingering Saint Mary's Spirit which will always live in our hearts.

Unlimited patience, understanding, and school spirit are characteristics of the man who willingly devotes his time and interests to Saint Mary's students. His genuine friendliness extends to each girl, and his co-operation to every group. In accordance with this co-operative spirit, he attends all school functions, thereby making our efforts seem worthwhile.

It is therefore with immeasurable gratitude and joy that we dedicate the 1953 Stage Coach to

OWENS HAND BROWNE

Administration

RICHARD G. STONE
President

A.B., Western Maryland College; Ph.D., The Johns Hopkins University; L.H.D., Western Maryland College. Saint Mary's 1946-.

He has wholeheartedly supported all our activities and guided us wisely through our years at Saint Mary's. We will remember him not only as an excellent president, but also as a helpful and understanding friend.

MARTHA DABNEY JONES

Her willingness, devotion, interest, and understanding have impressed upon us the Saint Mary's Spirit. Her guidance, encouragement, and inspiration have contributed to our achievements and to our discovery of a deeper understanding of life. Through her memorable and outstanding qualities she has placed upon us a permanent mark which represents the best of Saint Mary's.

I. HARDING HUGHES

Our memories of Saint Mary's will certainly include Mr. Hughes, his devotion, sincerity, and guidance, all of which have helped to create in us a greater respect for the serious side of life. In the classroom, on the campus, and in the chapel, he has shown us the Christian way of everyday living, thereby increasing our appreciation of life and our love for Saint Mary's.

Class History

It was September 17, 1951, and the twelve returning juniors were on Smedes steps to greet the seventy-seven new girls who would be in their class. Lines formed to the right and to the left; friendly old girls greeted frightened new ones. But by some miracle we were all settled by the end of the day; although a few were homesick that first night, most of us had great fun meeting future friends and playing "do-you-know?"

Orientation week was filled with Iowa State tests, picnics, parties, hall skits, the Old Girl-New Girl party, confusion, and doubt. At our first breakfast, lipstick quickly classified the new girls. And when our counselors tried to explain the rules, our expressions confessed our lack of understanding. Truly, we were green first-yearers.

A week after school had opened, we sat with books in hand and stared unbelievingly at the long assignments. However, we soon became accustomed to such and welcomed the week ends which brought blind dates and girl-break dances. Shortly after our class elections in October we began working on our Junior Halloween party; we had a delightful time and hope that others enjoyed it as much as we did! In November we were thrilled to find many petitions passed, thereby getting many new privileges. Then came the long-awaited Thanksgiving holidays; although we loved Saint Mary's, we were anxious to go home for a few days. Just three weeks later we watched our first Christmas pageant and heard for the first time the seniors' beautiful caroling.

Christmas, however, came to an end, and lacking enthusiasm, we returned to Saint Mary's. After a few weeks of classes, we faced our first exams which were followed by a short rest.

With second semester came plans for the future. The student body began electing Student Government officers in February, and then we had our own class elections. Thinking back now, we made excellent choices, for our officers fulfilled their duties exceedingly well. On the sunporch as early as March, a few girls got tans while others only came down with the flu. Soon we were all working hard on plans and decorations for May Day and the Junior-Senior. The six from our class in the May Court added immensely to May Day, the theme of which was Toyland. That night we entertained the seniors at the Junior-Senior dance, and in recognizing the beauty of Stairway to the Stars, we realized that cutting out the many stars was well worthwhile. It seemed strange that later in the month we should take over the seniors' duties; actually, it was sad but made us realize that we would soon be seniors ourselves.

After final exams we learned that the kicking post and the Old Girl-New Girl party were not the only Saint Mary's traditions, for there were the Shakespearean play, the Glee Club Concert, and the dropping of the handkerchief at the closing of the school year.

September 1952 began months of happiness for us as seniors. This time we greeted Orientation Week with less bewilderment and did our best to make the new girls feel at home. We got a different view of Saint Mary's traditions and started out with a peaceful year. Some of the most memorable events came at Christmas time: for weeks we had been cutting out thousands of snowflakes for our Senior Dance, and we had the times of our lives that day! Barbara, Singing as the Virgin Mary, in the Christmas pageant, added beauty and dignity to the service; and then the day we left for home, we fifty-seven seniors rose early to sing carols to those still sleeping. Despite the unpleasant parts, and there were a few in these activities, we had a marvelous time and realized what a fine and united class ours was. When we returned from Christmas holidays, we stared enviously at diamonds and crammed for exams. Getting through that senior English was something else!

During the second semester the Senior Follies demanded time, but it was more fun than work! May Day was exceptionally wonderful that year. Queen Sarah looked lovely amid the activities of the Old Southern Plantation. Afterwards the juniors gave us a wonderful dance, for which we appreciated all their efforts.

When the juniors took over their new offices in the spring and we stepped down, regretfully we began reminiscing and realized that the end had come. Exams, another Shakespearean play, another Glee Club Concert, our own baccalaureate service, and commencement itself assured us that our days at Saint Mary's were over. All, all too soon shouts of joy and tears of regret ruled the day, for we had graduated from Saint Mary's.

Class Prophecy

Dear Gene,

I just got back from Europe and I couldn't wait to write you all about it. The boat trip, moonlight nights on the Riviera, gondolas in Venice, Maximes, but wait—I'll just have to start from the beginning.

The first thing I did was nearly miss my plane to New York. You can't tell me we don't live in a fast moving society. The engines began to roar the minute I stepped on and we reached an altitude of 5,000 feet before I got my safety belt fastened. Finally when I was all settled I turned around and who do you think I saw? Pat Flowers. I guess she forgot her dramamine for she looked rather green and I heard her say something to the steward about some fresh air. Then listening more closely, I heard him reply: "No, Miss, I'm sorry, but we just can't raise the windows." He adjusted the air conditioner; however, and she became in high spirits almost immediately. We had a wonderful time talking about old times at St. Mary's and she told me that Barbara White and Harriet Harris are her suite-mates at the Barbizon in New York. Barbara is an understudy of Lily Pon's besides being a student at Julliard. Pat said that Barbara is really excited because Lily has promised her that she can take the place of the flute in her famous duet. Harriet and Pat are both working at the Metropolitan and starting next week they get their names in lights.

Our conversation was interrupted by an announcement that we were preparing to land in New York. When we landed, Pat and I bade one another farewell and I joined the tour at the Statler Hotel. We spent a day of shopping and a night of visiting fabulous restuarants and seeing shows etc. before boarding ship. We ran into Barbara and Coach at the Stork Club when we had dinner. Mr. and Mrs. Shearer seemed very happy. They were embarking the next morning for Norway where Coach's team represented the United States in the Olympics. While shopping that morning, I ran into Martha Cope, Jackie Steed, and Joyce Sparger who are working at Montaldo's. When I saw them a new shipment of clothes had just arrived and they were waiting on each other; customers lined up eighteen deep before the manager finally corrected the situation.

The next morning we boarded ship—"The Lineberger," owned by Justin Smith. He named it for his loving wife, Doris Ann. The first persons I saw were Peggy Mitchiner and Patsy Daniels who were touring Europe also for the third time. Patsy deliberately left her pedal pushers in a French hotel so she'd have an excuse to return. The first thing we did after being assigned to our state rooms was to tour the ship. Pausing at the stern to feel the ocean breeze, who should we spy but Paula Smith cutting the wake with knife-like motions; she was, we found out later, practicing to take her tune in the Olympics after conquering the English Channel. Between swallows of the briny she managed to babble, "If I can swim through C.A.P.'s English, I can swim the Ocean." Lowering food and water to her were three ship hostesses, Betty Byrum, Virginia Currin, and Lucile Overton. When Virginia wasn't taking her turn at watch, she was writing her thesis—the only thing she lacks on her Ph.D.

Suddenly we were distracted when a 120-foot yacht passed us and we were able to read the huge lettering on the side "Touring the World—Queen of the Mardi-Gras—Miss Nancy McIver."

We were then distracted again when we felt rice pelting on our shoulders and turned to see Donna and Fred rushing away from ship-board wedding. Cocky Smith, Donna's only attendant after mysteriously catching the bouquet, became so excited that she tripped and fell right into Captain George's arms. Coincidence?

That night at dinner, the floor show opened with a can-can, starring Rachel Brooks, Gina Timberlake, Peggy Gwaltney, Lib Gillett, Bebe Correll, and featuring mainly Miss Isabella Mebane—world-famous for her combination of can-can, and ballet which she performed simultaneously with her rendition of "When the Saints Go Marching In." The next number on the program was a modern ballet to the tune of "Slaughter on Tenth Avenue," featuring Susie Nicoll and Libby Huffman assisted by Ricardo Montalban and Gene Kelly. The applause was so great that we were unable to hear the announcement of the next number but I recognized Emilie Adams as she swept into the spotlight and did a take-off on "Spellbound." She signed three Hollywood contracts before the act was completed.

England was wonderful and we managed to get an appointment with Queen Elizabeth at Buckingham palace. During our chat we were served tea by her favorite lady-in-waiting, Ann Carlton. Just as we were leaving, in walked the Big Three after a serious conference: Joseph Stalin, Winston Churchill, and Nell Eley. Nell won the last election by a slight margin over Eisenhower.

Paris was simply out of this world. At Maximes, Eleanor Lancaster doing summer work, waited on our table and the floor show was exquisite. We saw a dance taken from the latest production of "Red Shoes" based on your School of Ballet, Gene. You've really hit the top, kid, and was I proud! Before leaving for Rome, we visited a house of famous Paris fashions where Paula Whitaker modeled for a minimum of six thousand a week.

Rome was out of this world and while touring the old ruins we saw Emily Urquhart, famous architect, constructing a new arena. Her complaint was that one of the old ones, after standing for 2,000 years, finally collapsed; it couldn't stand the strain of another of Sara Fair's Girl-break dances.

After that, Gene, we sailed for New York and plainly enough, that about winds up my trip. I just wish you could have been along. I'll be waiting patiently for a detailed description of your trip, too. Don't forget to tell me who you saw.

Love,
Deedee

Dear Deedee,

I was so thrilled to get your letter about your fabulous trip to Europe. Sounds like you saw half our Class of '53 while you were over there! I think I've seen the other half since I took my trip to South America. Guess who my travel agent was? Genevieve James! She and Elizabeth Lynn are leading the gayest lives travelling about the continent for a huge airline company. Working for the same company are Jo Eaddy and Shirley Habel who really look good in their airline hostess uniforms. They were both hostessing on my plane and had lots of news about Barbara Brown and Ann Penn. They've been working in Rio for a coffee bean company. (Ann got her start at S.M.S. drinking instant coffee during senior exams.) I went to Mexico first to visit my old roommate, Carolyn Landis. She has been interested in Mexico ever since someone sent her a silver belt for her twentieth birthday. Really, she's just the perfect little housewife. Emily Urquhart lives a few acres away from Carolyn in a very cozy little house (only twenty-six rooms). Emily finds the environment inspiring for the plot of her newest Wild West novel. She told me of Cindy Ward's latest successful journal, "Who's Who in Hollywood." There's a whole chapter about Frances McNeill, Hollywood's most hilarious comedienne. Frances has twelve French poodles, each of a different color, to match her Parisian hats.

I finally left Mexico and set out for Colombia to visit Jeanne Summers, South America's good-will ambassadress. She and Haffye Sewell should have all our international problems solved soon, because they have a solution that never fails—those same big smiles that everybody loved at S.M.S. From Colombia I went to Argentina to see Louise Brand and Georgia Moore's huge cattle ranch. They always said they'd have thick steaks (and the lazy luxurious life that accompanies thick steaks) and believe me, they weren't exaggerating. When I was about to leave, who should gallop up but Nancy Booth and Peggy Williams? They've been living on a dude ranch since they left school. (Any connection to life in Holt Hall is purely coincidental.) Seems that the dude ranch fever was spreading, because they were expecting Ann Peoples and Sue Ghamblee to arrive any minute. Ann was coming for a much needed rest since she had been hostessing for all the Lambda Ghi rush parties.

I left for Brazil soon after Ann and Sue arrived. We left civilization behind and flew over the jungle. Just as we got over the darkest part, the engine failed, and we had to land in a grove of coconut trees. Just when we were about to give up all hope of rescue, a group of natives arrived, escorting their sun goddesses, Betsy Gorham and Bet Allen. They decided they were through with the quiet, dignified side of life, so they left on a jungle caravan soon after graduating from S.M.S. Betsy said that her only link with civilization was an occasional letter from Frances-Wright Kelly, who is living in the frozen north in an igloo. She doesn't seem to mind it, though. With the help of the natives, we soon had the plane in flying condition again, and bidding goodby to Betsy and Bet, headed toward Rio. I was so tired by that time that I decided to shorten my trip and go straight on to Cuba. In the waiting room at the airport, I heard a guitar, and some Cubans singing a familar tune—at last "Cry Baby, Cry" had achieved international fame! I remembered how you used to play for us in the parlor and in assembly. Just at that moment who should walk in but Becky Gordon. She and Syb Hamer were flying back to New York to preside over a fashion review. They are fast becoming the top designers in the nation. We promised to meet in the Biltmore the following week (under the clock of course), and with that promise I said goodby, hopped on a pogo stick, the latest type of transportation in Cuba, and went to my hotel. I slept for about a week, I was so exhausted, and left soon after for home. Trips are wonderful but I really don't think this one would have been worth it if I hadn't seen so many of our old classmates.

Write me again soon and keep turning out those hit songs!

Lots of love,
Gene

Last Will and Testament

We, the Senior class of 1953, being of anemic body and nervous mind, with tears in our eyes because we are about to leave the haunts of our girlhood, now bequeath the following articles in the manner named below.

Article I

To Dr. Stone we would like to leave a million dollars for the Endowment Fund. Unable to do this, we leave our appreciation and a million kisses which, although invaluable, will be hard to cash.

To Miss Jones we leave our gratitude for her sincere interest in each one of us. Without her guidance our life at Saint Mary's would have been a little empty.

To Mr. Moore we leave another volume of How To Understand Women. We hope that he will study it carefully for his summer reading.

To the rest of the faculty we leave our solemn promise that we will spend the summer searching madly for a group of prospective PHD's which we will recruit for the '53-'54 student body.

Article II

I, Bet Allen, leave the faculty house to Miss Blackiston.

I, Nancy Booth, leave the sweet, co-operative darlings of First Holt to their mothers who may be able to control them. I can understand the magnitude of their problem.

I, Louise Brand, bequeath my timid ways to Ellen Ozon.

I, Rachel Brooks, leave my position on the Honor Council to any Junior who likes late hours.

I, Barbara Brown, leave my psychology textbook to the birds who may understand it better than I did.

I, Donna Bull, leave my sweet, neat and stable roommate, Cockie Smith, to anyone who will have her.

I, Betty Byrum, leave my overflowing energy to Ann Ayers who hardly needs it.

I, Ann Carleton, leave my quiet attentiveness in class to Betty Dry.

I, Barbara Carter, leave my sweet southern drawl to Harriet Conger.

I, Susan Chamblee, will Richmond to the Yankees.

I, Martha Cope, leave the rest of the State Sigma Pi's to Betty Ruth Martin.

I, Bebe Correll, bequeath my confused love life to Timmy Timmons who never seems to have any trouble with Cupid.

I, Cinger Currin, leave my A's to the Junior class—there are enough to go around.

I, Patsy Daniels, leave my ability to speak French to anyone who is not planning to tour France. My French is the home-grown variety and might not be understood by a Frenchman

I, Deedee Davenport, leave my ability to walk the top of covered way at night to the rising Seniors who will need something of the sort to make life exciting.

I, Jo Eaddy, leave my complete calmness to the Day Students' room. It needs calmness badly.

I, Sara Fair, leave my wide awake and clear-headed approach to life to Lane Harvey.

I, Pat Flowers, leave my understanding of the world situation to Eisenhower.

I, Lib Gillett, leave my system of asking questions in class to anybody who wants to stall for extra time.

I, Becky Gordon, leave my assembly bell for a liberty bell.

I, Betsy Gorham, leave my unflustered ways to B-2 Nash.

I, Peggy Gwaltney, leave all the unattached Duke Pika's to the Student Body. Phil's all I want.

I, Shirley Habel, will the presidency of Sigma Pi Alpha to any Junior who has a passing acquaintance with a foreign language.

I, Syb Hamer, leave what's left of my nervous system to Saint Mary's in hopes that some small mouse may be able to use it.

I, Harriet Harris, return the organ to Mr. Broughton.

I, Libby Huffman, leave my love for the movies to Linda Anderson who never liked to study, anyway.

I, Frances-Wright Kelly, leave with a smile, no tears, and a thousand Hallelujahs.

I, Eleanor Lancaster, leave my gift of gab to Margo Hester.

I, Carolyn Landis, leave my laugh to Efttie Chonis.

I, Doris Ann Lineberger, leave my eyes, eye-lashes and all to Bobby (Eyes) Coleman.

I, Elizabeth Lynn, will my charm and poise to Alice Bost.

I, Isabella Mebane, will my News and Observer route to any girl who wants to try and collect money from a bunch of broke tight-wads.

I, Peggy Mitchiner, leave my fabulous tales of Raleigh to Jeannette Uzzell who can add them to her fabulous tales of Asheville.

I, Georgia Moore, leave all the campus slips I have left (two in number) to next year's counselors.

I, Nancy McIver, will my love to the Big Four to Eve Hargrave.

I, Frances McNeill, leave Second Holt to join Arthur Godfrey and his comedy hour.

I, Susie Nicoll, happily leave Orientation Week, English and study hall to next year's vice-president.

I, Gene Overbeck, leave my one lock of over-hanging hair to Frances Perry.

I, Lucile Overton, will my storybook romance to Sydna Rustin who is never seen without a love story magazine.

I, Ann Penn, leave my undying love for English to Mela Royall. I think she may make more A's than I did.

I, Haffye Sewell, bequeath my quiet, ladylike, tinkling laugh and my trusty uke to Blanny Robertson. Carry on Blanche.

I, Cockie Smith, leave the Biology department at SMS for the Chapel Hill Arboretum which offers unlimited opportunity for the study of Botany.

I, Paula Smith, leave Saint Mary's bankrupt after too many trips to Dr. Hayward's office.

I, Joyce Sparger, leave my Hemingway-like writing talents to Irene Emory.

I, Jackie Steed, leave all the day students and their lovely room to next year's prexy. Good luck dear child.

I, Jeanne Summers, bequeath my lovely little pony-tail hair-do to Gwen Grizzard.

I, Gena Timberlake, leave my quiet, petite way to Glenn Lightsey.

I, Emilie Urquhart, leave five dozen boxes of atomic aspirin to next year's Belles editor who will need everything she can get to combat headaches.

I, Cynthia Ward, bequeath my ability to dance the "Nags Head Barefoot Hop" to Baby Rea Elliott who will undoubtedly find a good use for it.

I, Paula Whitaker, leave my Circle torch to the Statue of Liberty.

I, Barbara White, leave my ability to carry a tune to Ann Gregory who sings "God Save the Queen" so beautifully.

I, Peggy Williams, bequeath my ability to get into mischief to B. C. Athey who already has some talents along that line.

I, Joyce Woodard, leave a parting word of advice for the rising Seniors. Be sure you room on the Third Holt.

We, the testators, Adams, Eley and Matheson leave for that earthly paradise, that little spot of hollowed soil, that veritable Utopia, known in the vulgar tongue as Ahoskie.

We, the testators, representing the Senior Class, do appoint the honest faculty to administer this, our last will and testament, on this first day of June, 1953.

Senior life at Saint Mary's was hard. Some played bridge, or went shopping. Some dated, while others waited. Some even studied—or at least tried to.

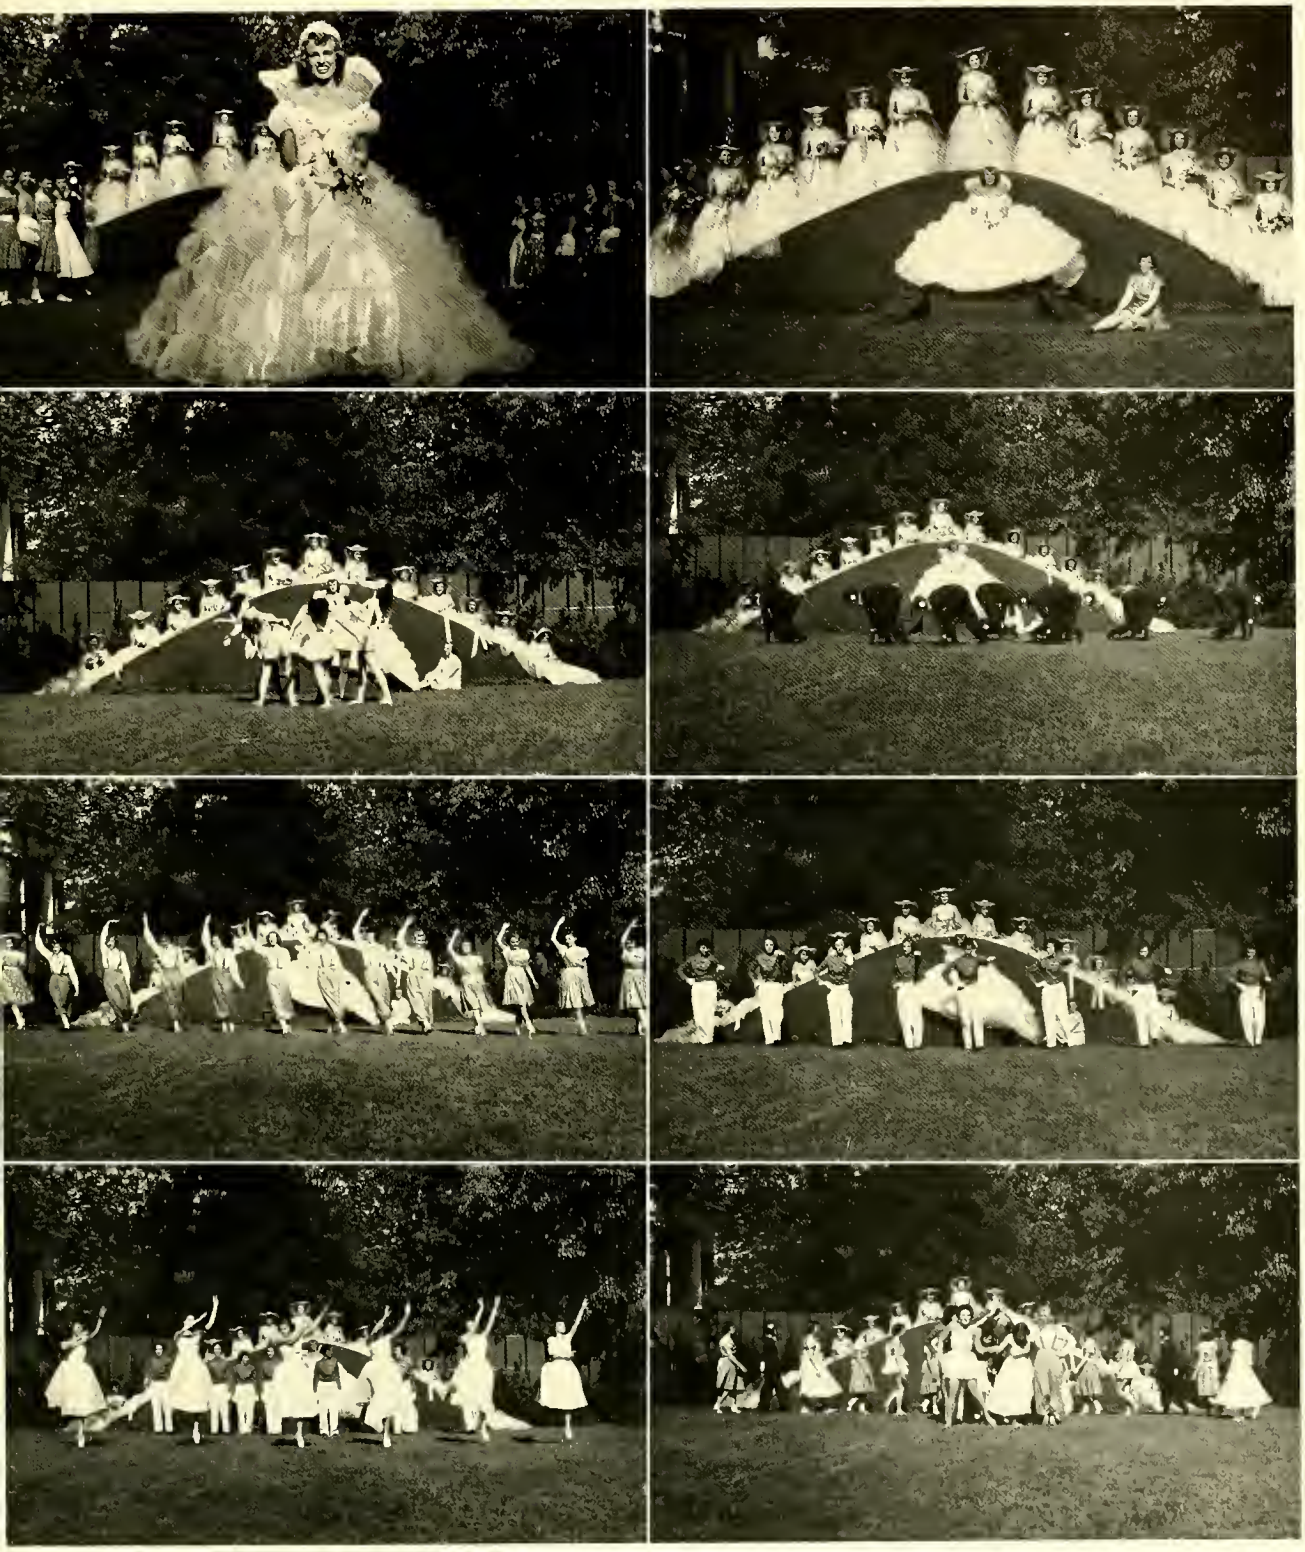
May Day-1952



Our Toyland was beautiful with Pat Boesser reigning as May Queen. How we enjoyed the beautiful dolls, toy fairies, teddy bears, toy puppets, wooden soldiers, and the French dolls. We hated for the Grand March to come and to see the end of another beautiful May Day.

Young Carolinians

MEET THE CHALLENGE!

Just as they did in 1952, young Carolinians everywhere are proving their mettle by planning and working to help their communities win the Finer Carolina Contest for '53!

Building a Finer Carolina is everbody's job — so let's all get on the team! Now is your chance to prove again your right to help create your own opportunities. Meet this new challenge by pledging your services to your local Finer Carolina Committee. Help them now to build finer farms, finer towns and a finer future for all of us.

We, at C. P. & L. Co., are trying to do our part by again sponsoring the Finer Carolina Contest for '53. We know we can rely on you young people to do your part, in making your communities finer places in which to live, work and play.
